

PROJECT MANAGEMENT

When a property project is to be undertaken, outsourcing the role to a professional Project Manager allows clients to focus resources on their core business activity.

The Project Manager is now considered to be a fundamental part of any development project: driving it forward, controlling costs, quality, and deadlines, and reporting to the client. The Project Manager's role increasingly encompasses less traditional responsibilities such as marketing, registration (care homes), fit-out, and establishing facilities management and maintenance contracts.

At Pinders, Project Managers effectively become client staff members: using their business and technical skills to protect their client's interests and lead the overall team on their behalf. Typical roles include, but are not limited to, the following:

Project Management Services

- ▶ Feasibility studies
- ▶ Develop the client brief and consultant's roles
- ▶ Appointment of other team consultants
- ▶ Site identification & acquisition
- ▶ Client reporting
